RE: Outdoor recreation support for the River Democracy Act

Dear members of the Oregon delegation,

We, the undersigned businesses, guides, recreation and tourism organizations, and Oregon outdoor industry leaders are writing in support of the River Democracy Act. The Oregon economy relies heavily on outdoor recreation, for which clean water, healthy river systems, and access to public lands are necessary. The addition of over 3,200 miles of Oregon rivers and streams throughout the state to the National Wild and Scenic Rivers system will help protect these waterways that sustain our communities and fuel our economy. In this time of chaos and uncertainty around our public lands, it is more important than ever to establish strong, enduring protections for our state's rivers and streams.

Outdoor recreation is one of Oregon's premier economic drivers. According to a 2022 analysis, spending on outdoor recreation in Oregon exceeded $16 billion and supported 192,000 jobs¹. This economic contribution is especially important in rural parts of the state where rivers like the Rogue, Deschutes, North Umpqua, Owyhee, John Day, Grande Ronde, Illinois, and McKenzie draw visitors each year for world-renowned recreation opportunities.

Our industries and way of life in Oregon rely on access to the special public lands and waters that our state affords. On public lands and waters like these, we teach our children to fish and hunt; we watch migratory birds fly overhead and wildlife stop for a drink; we search every eddy, riffle, and pool for steelhead and trout; we navigate drift boats and rafts through rapids with guests from around the world. These places make our livelihoods possible, and our quality of life truly exceptional.

Oregon's beloved rivers, and the tributaries both large and small that feed them, are vital to Oregon's outdoor recreation economy, to our quality of life and the health of our communities, and to our natural heritage. For this reason and many others, we are happy to support the River Democracy Act.

Oregon's beloved rivers, and the federal agencies in charge of managing them, are facing unprecedented pressures at the national level. Even as we work to enact strong, permanent legislative protections for these waterways, it is also vital that we support the Forest Service, Bureau of Land Management, US Fish and Wildlife Service, and other public employees who work to conserve these natural treasures.

Senators Wyden and Merkley, we appreciate your many years' worth of effort to advance this effort; please make passage of this bill a priority and know that we stand behind your efforts. Congressman Bentz and Congresswomen Bonamici, Hoyle, Dexter, Bynum, and Salinas, we strongly encourage you to help pass this vital legislation to protect Oregon rivers and support Oregon's booming outdoor recreation industry. And we urge you all to support federal public lands managers who safeguard these natural treasures for the benefit of all Americans.

Sincerely,
